

The Day After Boston

By Kate Mullikin

Looks like a rag on a stick
But it's our flag –

So sick of seeing it half-mast,
My faith half dead,
My mind aghast.

The wind is whipping it around
So fast I don't notice its stars
That once seemed so bright.

It's wide open, flailing,
Vulnerable-
Just like my heart tonight.